

Occupational Therapy and Physiotherapy services in social welfare agencies in Hong Kong

Occupational Therapy service makes use of purposeful activities and assistive devices to improve disabled persons' skills in the areas of daily living, community living, learning, social relationships, leisure and physical function.

Examples of services provided by an occupational therapist:

1. To plan and implement training and/or occupational therapy activities for service users and to evaluate the activities rendered;
2. To conduct assessment on the functioning and work capacities of service users;
3. To plan and implement community living skills training to service users in the centre, at their homes and in the community;
4. To ensure that the occupational therapy services achieve quality standard;
5. To collaborate with staff members contributing to the accomplishment of intended service goal.

Physiotherapy service is the use of physical principles and methods in optimizing the neuro-musculo-skeletal and cardio-respiratory functions of the disabled.

Examples of services provided by a physiotherapist:

1. To provide assessment on physical function and physiotherapy for service users;
2. To plan, implement and evaluate physiotherapy programmes;
3. To collaborate with a multi-disciplinary staff team to design and conduct different rehabilitation programmes for service users;
4. To ensure the physiotherapy service meets the objectives and to achieve quality standard.
